PODULAR DIRECT SUPERVISION JAILS: 1995 DIRECTORY

Introduction

The National Institute of Corrections (NIC) has developed this document as a resource for local officials, jail practitioners, and others interested in the direct supervision concept of jail design and management. As a directory, the document will help readers locate direct supervision facilities that they may wish to study, contact, or visit. As a data source, the document provides basic information on the design, bedspace, and other aspects of the facilities listed.

For the purpose of this document, a podular direct supervision housing unit is described as follows:

- The housing unit design is podular. Inmates' cells are arranged around a common area, usually called a "dayroom." There is no secure control booth for the officer, and there are no physical barriers between the officer and the inmates. The officer may have a desk or table for paperwork, but it is in the open dayroom area.
- The inmate management style is direct supervision. The officer is stationed in the pod with the inmates for the duration of his/her shift. The officer moves about the pod and interacts with the inmates to manage their behavior.

In direct supervision, the officer spends his/her entire shift in only one pod. If the officer divides his/her time among two or more pods, supervision is considered intermittent, not direct.

Organization of the Directory

The directory includes: 1) a

2) jail entries organized alphabetically by state and jurisdiction, with federal facilities at the end of their respective states; and 3) an index of jails by facility category. The entry for each facility includes the following information:

All jail entries:

- Operating agency.
- Facility name, address, and telephone and fax numbers.
- Facility type—podular direct supervision, conversion, or combination of designs.
- Status—operating, or current phase of planning.
- Opening date.
- Elevation—low rise (one to two stories), mid--rise (three to four stories), or high--rise (five or more stories).
- Total beds.
- Total direct supervision beds.

Podular direct supervision jails only:

- Direct supervision pod size.
- Maximum number of inmates one officer supervises in a direct supervision pod.
- Number of non--direct supervision pods set aside for special populations and bedspace/population details, if applicable.
- Number of beds used for disciplinary purposes.
- Number and size of direct supervision pods that are dormitories and dormitory detail, if applicable.
- Increase in the number of direct supervision beds since the jail opened, if applicable.

Jails converted to direct supervision:

- Operational and/or physical plant changes made for the conversion.

Jails with a combination of design styles:

- Populations housed in direct supervision pods.

Future Updates

NIC recognizes that this listing rectory will be updated annually to rect supervision facilities as we inadvertently omitted.

NIC encourages readers to tell future editions of this directory. This
